A RED CROSS APPEAL FOR PEACE

In virtue of a higher law and duty, and of principles above the level of human passions, the helping hand of the Red Cross was stretched forth to all victims throughout the ordeal of the Great War.

To-day, the Red Cross owes it to itself and to all its many workers to proclaim as an ideal and a practical intention, a struggle against the horrors of war, an attempt by world-wide help and unselfishness definitely to abolish war.

The mere continuation of Red Cross activity in time of peace will no longer suffice. It is the wish of the Red Cross to work in the interest of peace.

Therefore, the Red Cross calls upon all well-hearted citizens, irrespective of nationality, religious belief, profession, or social rank, to join, as far as lies in their power in a systematic campaign against that spirit of war, which is a constant menace to the world's peace.

During five years, millions of men were killed or mutilated. Today thousands of ex-soldiers or prisoners at last set free bear indelible marks of bodily and mental suffering. All of them believed that the generations to come would reap the fruits of the great ordeal in a new international life, which would be more brotherly, franker and more full.

Instead, disorder and uncertainty, distrust and greed, hatred and the threat of fresh quarrels are re-appearing throughout the world. The spirit, of war, unconquered, reigns supreme. Its sinister influence is abroad. It inspires lines of policy and press campaigns, which lead public opinion astray and embitters the economic competition among nations.

During the terrible years of the recent war, superhuman efforts were required of the different nations. In order to inspire such sacrifices, a supreme reward was promised—namely, the annihilation of this same spirit of war, which is a peril as old as the world and a constant menace to mankind.

Thus generations unborn would have been delivered from the scourge at the price of the suffering which the war entailed. This hope sustained nations and armies.

Have they hoped in vain?

Have millions of human lives and the wealth of nations been sacrificed in vain?

Faced with these questions, the Red Cross recognized a duty.

At the suggestion of Senator Ciraculo, Chairman of the Italian Red Cross, the tenth International Red Cross Conference, which met at Geneva on April 14th, 1921, voted the following resolution:

"The International Committee of the Red Cross Societies shall address an appeal to all nations, exhorting them to combat the spirit of war, which dominates the world."

These two organizations call therefore on nations and individuals to fight with all means in their power this malevolent spirit. May statesmen, writers, school and university, capital and labor, remember that it is their duty, in the interest of mankind, to help peace to conquer the earth. Above all, children should be brought up in this fundamental belief.

It is essential that the human mind should once more be open to the broad lines of an international spirit, which, while allowing the citizen to love his town, and the patriot his country, teaches all men to respect the existence and the rights of their fellows, by bringing into the daily life the individual light of a justice, which is to be in all the world for all the time.

This true internationalism cannot be attained without the active and intimate co-operation of governments, parliaments, voluntary organizations, the press, the clergy, and above all, national Red Cross Societies. To the union of these forces must be added a supreme factor, the power of individual conviction. Every man, as far as lies in his power, must contribute to make peace permanent in the world.

The individual must no longer see the world in the light of his own selfishness, anger, fear, and human passion, but in a spirit of concord and mutual aid.

Thus only can a better future be prepared.

Faithful to the ideal which inspired its founders, and which it has ever served, the Red Cross hereby declares before the whole world, that its work does not end with war. The Red Cross appeals to the heart of all mankind, that each individual may find in himself the needful strength and determination to make and keep universal peace.

ELECTION DAY FIXED FOR DECEMBER 6TH

Ottawa, Oct. 7th.—It was announced to-day that election day would be held on December 6th, and Nomination Day on November 22nd.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY

To the Editor:—

Dear Sir,—By Royal Proclamation, His Excellency, the Governor General of Canada has again designated October 9th as Fire Prevention Day. During the week October 10th to 15th lessons on fire prevention subjects will be given in every public school, public meetings will be held in many of the larger cities, towns and villages, and the owners and occupants of property everywhere throughout Canada will be counselled to give special attention to the removal of fire hazards from their premises.

Fire waste is one of the most serious economic problems confronting Canada at the present time. The public in general is vitally effected by the tremendous losses annually incurred by fire and the enormous expenditure rendered necessary to adequately protect life and property from its ravages. Seeing that at least seventy-five per cent. of all fires are caused by carelessness and can therefore be prevented, it is the obvious duty of municipal authorities, fire department officials, boards of trade, and other representative citizen bodies to bring the matter to the attention of the people, in order that this may be effectively accomplished, this department most respectfully asks for your co-operation. Can we have it?

Enclosed herewith are copies of the Royal Proclamation and the provisions of the Criminal Code as affecting fires. You will note that the Criminal Code defines negligence as contravention of any law or ordinance established to prevent fires. The duty of municipal authorities to bring to the attention of their citizens all regulations affecting fire safety is evident. Might we suggest that you emphasize this point, by recommending that your local authorities give adequate publicity through the newspapers to all such laws, in order that the public may be properly informed. Other topics of interest along similar lines will, no doubt, suggest themselves.

Thanking you for your many courtesies in the past, and assuring you of my sincere appreciation for your present assistance, I am,

Yours very faithfully,
J. GROVE SMITH,
Dominion Fire Commissioner.

SAM BROWNE.

Man Who Invented Army Belt Lost Arm In Battle.

The Sam Browne belt of the British officer, so railed at by hyphenated members of Congress when tentatively adopted for United States officers during the war, has now been finally and officially adopted by the Harding-Weeks administration, and the following account of the origin of the name is taken from the New York Tribune:

Who was Sam Browne?

The original Sam Browne was a most gallant British officer and gentleman who won the Victoria Cross fighting for mery England in India during the autumn of 1858.

Lord Roberts, field marshal and advocate of preparedness in England, who was a friend of the dashing cavalry officer, gives this account of the dead hero who received so much publicity in the late war because he was careless enough to have his arm cut off and therefore forced to devise some means whereby he could be present at parade without his trusty sabre dragging on the ground.

"This popular and gallant officer, well known to every native in upper India as 'Sam Sahib' and to all the officers of the whole of His Majesty's army as the inventor of the sword-belt universally adopted on service, distinguished himself greatly in the autumn of 1858. With 280 sabres of his own regiment and 350 native infantry he attacked a party of rebels who had taken up a position at Nuria, a village at the edge of Tarai, about ten miles from Bahraich. Browne managed to get to the rear of the enemy without being discovered.

"A hand-to-hand fight then ensued, in which he got two severe wounds, one on the knee, from which he nearly bled to death, the other on the left shoulder, cutting right through the arm. The enemy were completely routed, and fled, leaving their four guns and 300 dead on the ground. Browne was deservedly rewarded with the Victoria Cross."

Sam Browne died at The Wood, Ryde, Isle of Wight, on March 14, 1903. A memorial tablet has been put up for him in St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

A COURSE OF FIVE ENTERTAINMENTS

OF CHAUTAUQUA STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE

The Ladies' Musical and Literary Society have contracted with the Chautauqua Lyceum Bureau for five entertainments during the winter. The people, of not only the town of Napanee, but the country surrounding for ten to fifteen miles should read this with a great deal of pleasure. The opportunity to hear really high class artists in the smaller places, come seldom, and especially at a price that is within the reach of practically everyone.

The Ladies' Musical and Literary Society was organized for this purpose, mainly to give our people really worth while entertainments at a nominal cost.

These five entertainments will only cost you $2.00 and 20c. war tax, if you buy a season's ticket before the entertainments commence. The regular fee will be 75c. a night, with 5c. war tax. Canvassers will call on you at your home, if you live in town. Be sure and have your $2.20 ready. Those living in the country may secure their season tickets from the merchants who usually sell the Chautauqua tickets in the summer. All the work done by the committees is absolutely free, so we would ask that you receive kindly the ladies who will call at your home and be ready for them, so that they will not have to call again.

The programme is as follows:

October 29th—The Del Mar Ladies' Quartette.

November 18th—Arthur Walwyn Evans.

December 17th—The Patricia Trio.

February 8th—Josephine Martino and assisting artists.

February 16th—The Victorian Artists.

Each entertainment in the course is worth the $2.00. After Arthur Walwyn Evans (nephew of Lloyd George) was here in 1919, most of the people who heard him would have given $2.00 to hear him alone.

Wire Hawsers.

A new method of attaching wire hawsers to the hulls of sunken vessels, where a diver cannot pass them under, called the limpet system, is described in Marine Engineering of Toronto. The limpet is a soft iron body, carrying a number of drill taps driven by small motors, the current being supplied from the salvage vessels. The limpet is lowered until it comes in contact with the hull of the vessel, when it is magnetized, causing it to cling to the plates. The drills are then started, and after running a pre-determined length of time the current is switched off, the limpet is hauled to the surface, and the drills are left tightly fastened in the ship's hull. The ends of these drills are formed into eyes, to which the hawsers can be attached.

Medal Muddles.

There is always a good deal of grumbling about the delay in the distribution of war medals, some of which do not reach their owners for many years.

The record medal in this respect was that given for the Duke of Wellington's Peninsular War. The campaign ended in 1812, but it was not until 1847 that it was decided to award a general service medal. Now but of them reached their recipients more than fifty years after they had been earned.

Though medals to commemorate wars or single battles have been struck in this country ever since the time of Queen Elizabeth, they were not at first distributed to all who had taken part in the fighting; they were given rather as rewards to those who had shown special bravery or performed meritorious services.

Those struck by Oliver Cromwell after his Dutch wars were large gold plates of considerable value. The first distribution that was anything like general was that made by Charles I. during the Civil War, when he presented a silver medal to every Royalist soldier.

The Chinese issued the first known general service medal nearly two thousand years ago.

When Grandmother Was a Girl

HOOP skirts were worn by those who first asked the druggist for, and insisted on having, the genuine Golden Medical Discovery put up by Dr. Pierce over 50 years ago. Dress has changed very much since then. But Dr. Pierce's medicines contain the same dependable ingredients. They are standard today just as they were fifty years ago and never contained alcohol.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the stomach and blood cannot be surpassed by any tonic and alterative today.

When you feel "all out of sorts" —your vitality at a low ebb—the blood becomes surcharged with poisons! The best tonic is called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Dr. Pierce manufactured this "Discovery" from roots and barks without alcohol—a corrective remedy, the ingredients of which nature put in the fields and forests for keeping us healthy. It puts vim, vigor, vitality into the blood. Try it! All druggists.

A NEW CATERPILLAR WHICH ATTACKS CORN

In Lennox and Addington county, a new caterpillar has been found in large quantities attacking the corn. Many farmers think that this worm is the corn borer. In order to carefully explain the nature of the pest the following letter from L. Caesar, B. A., B. S. A., Provincial Entomologist for Ontario, may be read by the farming community with much interest and profit:

Guelph, October 6th, 1921.

Mr. C. C. Main, B. S. A.,
Agricultural Representative,
Napanee,

Dear Mr. Main:

As to the insect attacking the corn this year. The one you refer to is not the new European corn borer, but is an old pest known as the corn ear worm which has become so abundant this year all over the province that many canning factories, probably near all, have the last two weeks been forced to cease canning corn. This has been an abnormally favorably year for insects, and we have several kinds of pests doing much damage this year that ordinarily do but little. This corn ear worm is one of them. The insect must have been in this country for at least thirty years. I am not sure, but I think it is a native of North America. Down in the Southern States it is destructive almost every year on sugar corn, and further north it commonly makes the late sweet corn a precarious crop.

There are two broods of the insect a year, the first in July and late June attacks various kinds of vegetables as well as corn, and was here last year, but almost no one complained of the amount of injury, yet it was abundant enough to produce a sufficient number of moths to make, as you know, a very great host of caterpillars this autumn. The larger of these caterpillars will pupate in the soil and produce the moths next year, but all the immature ones, and there are a great many of them, will perish. Some think that our worst outbreak may be due to moths migrating from the south and laying eggs. I am not sure of this. It has been worked out fully for our province. As to next year: I am very hopeful that natural enemies will once more bring it under control. The fact that it is so abundant this fall does not necessarily imply that it will not be even more troublesome next year than usual, in fact, it is quite common after a year of great abundance to find almost a total disappearance of some of our native insects. However it will be wise to take some steps to prevent possible serious injury next year. The chief of these is to plow deeply infested corn fields late this fall, just as late as can be done if they are disked after it would be of considerable value. The benefit comes from breaking up the pupal cases and thus destroying the pupae in the soil. Next year the planting of early corn for canning purposes would take over the danger. I think that I should scarcely care to risk late corn if there are many of these insects attacking corn early in the month of July. I hope that by that date we can forecast what the pest is likely to amount to. In the United States they sometimes resort to spraying the silk of late sweet corn with arsenate of lead because the eggs are laid on the silk and the caterpillars can be killed before they enter the corn, or as they are entering the ears. Unfortunately, we have not given the results that we hoped for, but it has done some good.

Yours sincerely,
L. CAESAR.

GREAT BOON FOR SMALL CAR OWNERS

Dunlop Rubber Company's New Straight Wall, 31 x 4 Cord Tires.

Users of cars taking 30 x 3½ rims have now available a Straight Wall type of rim, which allows the use of a 31 x 4 Straight Wall Cord Tire, recently developed by the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited.

This 31 x 4 Cord Tire, as previously stated, is made to fit the new Straight Wall rim in 30 x 3½ size, and its introduction at this date is particularly interesting because the 31 x 4 Straight Wall Cord Tire represents an extension of the Straight Wall principle in tire-building to the smaller car tire. This makes it possible for owners of "Briscos," "Chevrolet," "Ford," Gray-Dort," "Maxwell," or "Overland" cars to use the new Straight Wall Tire—if they so desire—by conversion of their present Clincher Rims into Straight Wall.

Rim makers are now supplying 30 x 3½ Straight Wall Rims to interchange with 30 x 3½ Clincher Demountable Rims or Solid type 30 x 3½ Clincher Rims.

The new 30 x 3½ Straight Wall rim is exactly the same as the 32 x 3½ Straight Wall rim except that it is twenty-three inches in diameter instead of twenty-five.

"31 x 4 Straight Wall" introduces a new size in Cord Tires, one that undoubtedly will be very popular because of the records it will set for tremendous mileage.

One Car Maker has already adopted the new Dunlop Cord Tire for equipment purposes, and the prospects are that others will follow the example immediately.

31 x 4 Straight Wall Cord is supplied in both "Ribbed" and the well-known "Traction" tread designs.

liabilities on "Hydro" account for eight years—1913 to 1920 inclusive. It showed that the percentage of Net Debt to Total Assets had declined during the period as follows:

1923—88 per cent.
1914—83 per cent.
1915—80.3 per cent.
1916—78.4 per cent.
1917—75.5 per cent.
1918—71 per cent.
1919—67.9 per cent.
1920—65.3 per cent.

The gratifying thing about this comparison of percentages is the steadiness of the rate of decline (despite the unsteadiness of the times). It is an average of a little over 3 per cent. per annum. If this rate is maintained in normal times, it would mean the extinction of the debt in less than the debenture period.

The reserve for depreciation of local plants in 1913 was $478,145.89, against an aggregate plant value of $10,081,469.16. In 1920 it was $4,796,927.39, against an aggregate plant value of $27,409,316.82, or about 5 per cent. to about 18 per cent.

Meantime also the surplus on local operation has been increasing progressively.

No one can examine the finances of the municipalities associated with the Hydro-Electric System without being convinced of the soundness of the enterprise and the great industrial possibilities which it must bring to the Province and the country.

Beautiful Isle of Wight

Always Favorite Haunt Of the English Royalty

FOR centuries "that island of beauty called Wight" has been a favorite haunt of royalty.

From early girlhood to her last day Queen Victoria had an almost passionate love for this "enchanted island," as she more than once called it. As a girl of fourteen she spent a delightful holiday, in company with her mother, at Norris Castle, near East Cowes, and in the rapture of her first impressions made up her mind that some day she would have a home there as beautiful as the island itself.

She had only been married about four years when the long-cherished project assumed practical shape. An estate belonging to Lady Isabella Blachford came into the market, and was acquired by the Queen and the Prince Consort. There was erected the mansion known to almost every visitor to the Isle of Wight—Osborne House—with its exquisite setting of gardens.

It was in the gardens of Osborne House that King Edward and his brothers and sisters became expert in the art of gardening, each royal child having his or her own plot and complete set of tools, which may be seen to this day; and in the grounds they built their mimic forts and "played at soldiers."

But this island home has been dearer to Princess Beatrice and her daughter, King Alfonso's Queen, than to any other of its royal residents (Queen Victoria, perhaps, excepted), for it was in Whippingham Church that Princess Beatrice wore her bridal veil, and, at Osborne Cottage, Princess Ena grew up through a happy childhood to lovely womanhood.

The chancel in Whippingham Church belonged to Queen Victoria, and was built at her sole expense in 1855. It contains a very fine memorial to the Prince Consort, as well as memorials to Prince Leopold and Princess Alice, also executed at the command of her late majesty.

Of Queen Victoria's predecessors on the throne, it would be difficult to name one who has not been a more or less frequent and delighted visitor to the island. George IV. in his regency days—as also his brothers, the Dukes of Clarence (later, William IV.), and of Gloucester—made many a trip in the Royal George from his beloved Brighton to Cowes, where he was an enthusiastic spectator of the yacht racing.

James II. frequently ran over to the island from Portsmouth, and was enthusiastic in its praises. Charles II. held his revels in it with his boon companions; in his honor a new road was made through Parkhurst Forest; and on one occasion it is recorded that he found the island a most hospitable one to be wrecked on.

Charles I. had mingled memories of the Isle of Wight, which he first visited as a boy of nine on a hunting trip with his father, and to which nearly forty years later he fled from his enemies, only to find a prison in Carisbrooke Castle. His daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, died there in 1650.

Eyes of the Sea.

Without the lighthouses erected around the coast of Britain, and maintained by the corporation called Trinity House, ships would be in far greater danger while on the sea than they are now.

These lighthouses warn vessels of sunken rocks and jutting headlands, which are a danger to navigation at night time.

The Lizard light, which is the last link between England and vessels sailing in a westerly direction, is visible for twenty miles, and gives warning of many cruel reefs, with which the coast of Cornwall abounds.

The Eddystone, which, is, perhaps, the best known of the, English lighthouses, stands on a rock off Plymouth, and has a range of seventeen and a half miles. The light on Lundy Island carries thirty miles. Next to point of carrying distance is the light on the Needles, those sharp-pointed rocks off the Isle of Wight. This has a range of twenty-seven miles.

The South Foreland light is visible for twenty-five miles, and that on Beachy Head twenty-two miles.

Britain's Bible Towns.

When a man is told to go to Jericho he might ask, "Which?" for there are at least a dozen in the world.

On large ordnance maps of England, Paradise occurs five times, and Nineveh, Mount Ararat, Mount Zion, and Mount Ephraim three times each.

In the county of Bedford there is a Calvary Wood, and in Dorset a Jordan Hill, not to mention the famous Quaker burial place in Buckinghamshire known as Jordans. Hampshire rejoices in a sleepy hollow called Land of Nod, Cambridgeshire has a Noah's Ark, and Worcestershire a Moab's Wash Pot.

After that, such commonplaces as Hebron, Joppa, Bethlehem, Gideon, and Herod pass almost unnoticed. All the same, all are to be found in England.

Seek Pulp Supply.

In order to ascertain the resources of the country in woods and other material suitable for local manufacture of newspaper, the Argentine Minister of Agriculture has ordered a technical investigation to be made. In the year 1919 Argentina imported more than 15,000 metric tons of wood pulp and 43,000 metric tons of newsprint paper.

WHERE DEAD SHIPS SLEEP.

Davy Jones' Locker Exists on the Upper Lakes.

In a little cove on the north rim of Penetanguishene Bay is a graveyards for ships. Since the days of the early thirties, ship after ship which has fulfilled a long career of usefulness upon the Upper Great Lakes has sailed its last trip to this watery mortuary and there has been scuttled, to sink beneath the dark depths to its last resting place on the bed of the bay. To-day many bones of these voyageurs of old may be seen littering the shore in this vicinity, while out in the deep, placid cove, dark timbers jutting forth show where other time-worn wrecks lie. Indeed, almost a score of lake oldtimers rest amid this burying ground and among them were vessels which in their day helped to make Canadian history.

Chief among these are the Surprise and the Confiance, which, possibly, are much better known under their original name of the Tigress and the Scorpion. Built in Erie for the United States navy, during the first year of the war of 1812, they formed a part of the Great Lakes fleets and were a thorn in the flesh of the British. In 1813 the two vessels helped to turn the tide of naval defeat upon the British squadron in Lake Huron; but in 1814 they fell into British hands, and thereafter constituted one of those "cutting out" expeditions which are so relished by the daring British tars. There was one of these, in the form of a fickle little schooner named the Nancy. She was under command of Lieut. Miller Worsley, R.N., and was sailing with supplies and men for the British naval and military position of great importance at the time and in constant danger of capture by the American frigates. When near her destination the "Nancy" was sighted by enemy cruisers and forced to run into a river to escape. She was rashly and discovered by the Scorpion and the Tigress, and after a gallant defence, Lieut. Worsley blew up his craft and escaped ashore with the stores. He made his way to the military post, and to its commander, Col. McDowall, outlined a daring plan for the capture of the two enemy ships. Four boats were prepared for the "cutting out" expedition and manned by the crew of the Nancy and soldiers from the fort. With one sixpounder, they left on the expedition, accompanied by a flotilla of canoes, filled with Indian warriors.

The United States ships were found lying some distance apart. The Tigress was boarded first and in the dark of night only a desultory defence was made by the surprised sailors. The Scorpion was now seen bearing down, but her commander suspected nothing amiss. He anchored but two miles away, in utter ignorance that the companion ship was in enemy hands. Lieut. Worsley, Lieut. Worsley slipped his cable and ran down close to the Scorpion, with his crew concealed below. At close range a 24-pounder was fired and then the attackers boarded. Soon the Union Jack was flying above the Stars and Stripes. The British had but one man wounded—a small though the affair may have been, its effect was far-reaching. It gave back to the British control of the Huron and relieved the situation at Mackinac.

It is a peculiar fact that the graveyard of ships should be all that remains of the effort of the naval authorities to establish a station at Penetanguishene. At one time plans were drawn which would have made this place the biggest shipyard upon the Upper Great Lakes. Lieut. Poynts, R.N., combined officer to Worsley, was instructed by Sir James Yeo, commodore and commander-in-chief on the Great Lakes, to visit Penetanguishene Bay and report upon it as a naval depot. Lieut. Poyntz found it all that could be desired. At Lieut. Sir James Yeo's request upon Lieut. Poynts's report and he announced that arrangements had been made to create a dockyard and build a forty-gun frigate at once. Captain Collier, R.N., was sent up in command, together with shipwrights, carpenters and artificers, and the keel of the frigate laid down. It was never finished, however. The fittings, guns and other materials, sent out from England, were diverted to Kingston, where a 100-gun line-of-battle ship, then under construction at that dockyard, and a short time later peace was declared.

Whiskey In Older Ontario.

The whiskey which Old Man Ontario used to drink over the bar at five cents the glass a little while ago had its own qualities, according to a writer whose reminiscences appeared recently in the Bowmanville Statesman. He recounts that one of the roadside taverns east of Lake Scugog changed owners at one time. The new proprietor was duly initiated into the secret of whiskey making. The old barrel in the cellar, which had served its purpose, no doubt, for many years, was replaced by a new one, and the residue which was left in it was emptied in the shed yard. A flock of geese and some hens which sheltered around there were all killed, poisoned by mistaking the dregs of water. It was a standing joke for some time. But the fate of the fowls had little effect on the thirsty ones, as a warning.

Five cents a glass was the usual price for all kinds of drinks, hard or soft, and the same size glass was used for whiskey as for beer. If a barkeep had placed one of the small modern glasses before a thirsty customer looking for whiskey in those days, he would sure have had the glass thrown at him. But whiskey was cheap, being often or usually made on the premises. A single gallon of the genuine stuff would serve as a basis, it was said, for at least two barrels suitable for customers.

Prince of Wales Lives Such a Strenuous Life That His Health Suffers

"THE country is genuinely concerned for the possible effect on the health of the Prince of Wales of the strenuous life which he has led since he came to man's estate," says the London Times, editorially. "When the war began he was still a boy, and, like the other boys of his generation, did the work of a soldier for five long years.

"Since then, in the dominions and at home, he has worked harder than ever. Day after day since he first set foot on the Renown, he has expended, in the performance of his duties as heir to the throne, enough physical and nervous and mental energy to tax the resources of a much stronger man. He has never spared himself. Mind and body, he has thrown his whole energy into everything that he has done."

This utterance follows the announcement that the prince has a slight cold and that he has cancelled his immediate engagements. It follows closely a warning by the Earl of Derby, who presided at the annual meeting of the Lancashire division of the National Unionist Association. He deplored the too assiduous the prince's tour of Lancashire, during which he was Lord Derby's guest, and said:

"I realize that my demand on his royal highness' health and strength was more than I should have made, but he never lost his good temper. He was absolutely exhausted each evening, but his only thought was whether he had left anything undone that he could have done.

After the cheers had subsided Lord Derby continued:

"Only I left him last night I felt that if I had my way I should say to him:

"'Look here, young man, your spirit is willing. You are giving up the whole of your leisure to fit yourself for the task which will some day be yours. You have no right to give up your health, which is of as much value to the nation as to you. You have got a strenuous month before you, and after then take a holiday till April. Do nothing. Knock out even the voyage to India.'

"Seriously speaking, I think that something ought to be done to prevent the prince doing what he is only too ready to do giving up the whole of his time and health to the people and the country."

This time not the prince but Lord Derby's solicitude for him aroused cheers.

There can be no doubt that the prince has had a strenuous time in the last two years. His tours in Australia and New Zealand by no means lacked excitement. There was a constant round of official engagements, and he had little leisure and still less privacy. Everywhere he went through an exhausting program against the advice of his doctor.

Since his return to England there have been reports on which he has not carried out some public duty, and he has had comparatively few opportunities for rest or recreation.

The prince has made extensive tours in four months. Since March he has officially visited Scotland, East End of London, Ireland, Capital, Sparkhurst, Devon, Cornwall, Scilly Isles, Cambridge, Cardiff, Bristol and Lancashire, and has also presided at dozens of receptions and dinners, made many speeches on a remarkably wide range of subjects and attended all kinds of public functions. His activities have ranged from kicking off at a football match to presiding over a meeting of staid and elderly governors of a hospital.

Here, for example, was the young man's schedule on July 4:

8 a.m.—Train to Dover.
10.30.—Met King and Queen of Belgium.
1 p.m.—Back to London.
2.30.—Played in polo match at Hurlingham.
6 p.m.—Left Euston for Lancashire tour.
10 p.m.—Arrived at Knowsley as guest of Lord Derby.

There followed four strenuous days, made up of inspections, addresses, receptions, luncheons, unveiling of statues and memorials, talks with ex-service men, civic dignitaries and school children. And all the time, with the thermometer at 80 or so, he had to appear cheerful and interested and to smile as charmingly as ever.

The prince's favorite sports, polo and hunting, are sandwiched between official engagements. He keeps himself fit by devoting a part of every day—usually the early morning to regular exercise. Frequently he leaves York House, his residence, dressed in a sweater and flannel trousers, at 7 a.m., and drives in a taxi to Buckingham Palace. There he takes half an hour's vigorous running exercise round the garden, and then drives back to breakfast.

First Savings Bank.

At the village of Rothwell, in Dumfriesshire, may be seen a small private dwelling-house, a tablet on the wall of which indicates the fact that the first savings bank in Britain, if not in the world, was opened there by Rev. Henry Duncan in 1810.

At first the people did not take kindly to the idea of depositing their money with another person, and it was many years before any considerable number of depositors was reached. But when it was shown that it was quite safe to deposit money, and it became known that interest was given, the Rothwell bank became quite an important institution.

At first the money was kept in a strong wooden trunk, fastened by two heavy padlocks.

FARM MANAGEMENT

A Brief Study of Some of Its Leading Problems.

Systematic Method Important — A Question of Quantity, Quality, Cost, and Proceeds — Inefficiency and Carelessness to Be Barred—Good Care Will Save Many Foals.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

We speak of uncontrollable factors. Nevertheless farm management means control. The word "uncontrollable" is used loosely, and some measure of control is possible or hoped for in every farmer's undertakings. Farm management as a science, as a study, or a planned system, is a study of the methods of control. Farm practice is the corresponding art. A farmer was invited to attend a meeting to discuss improved methods of farming. "Nothing doing," was his reply, "I know a lot more now than I can get done." A very natural point of view, for the limitations of time, the scarcity of labor, adverse weather conditions and pests, prevent him from getting all those results which his plans and his labor deserve. Yet he must plan, and to plan intelligently he must be possessed of the best knowledge available. He must plan to get the greatest possible quantity, the best quality, at the lowest possible cost, and then he must plan to sell his produce at prices which will bring to him sufficient encouragement and reward.

Problems of Farm Management.

These are the problems of farm management: Quantity, quality, cost, and proceeds. And since they are closely inter-related, they cannot be studied separately, but must be considered all together. For example, European farming and Canadian farming are often compared to the disadvantage of the latter. It is asserted, and it is doubtless true, that the European farmer produces more per acre than the Canadian farmer does, and that the European acre is increasing in yield, while the Canadian acre is diminishing in yield. On the other hand, the Canadian farmer produces from three to ten times as much per man as the European farmer. In Europe, because of the dense population and the relative scarcity of land, production per acre is the measure of efficiency. In Canada, because of the scarcity of men on the land and the relative abundance of land, production per man is the measure of efficiency. In Canada the farmer has the option of applying more labor to the same acres, and producing more per acre, or applying his labor to more acres. The law of diminishing returns speedily induces him to choose his option by the working out of the law of production per acre is the inevitable result of this choice.

Management Influenced by Returns.

The farmer's interest is served by adopting such methods of farm management as will give him the greatest returns for labor and capital expended. Unfortunately, that system is invariably results. As a country where there is uncultivated land, in wasting soil fertility and diminishing the yields. The same distinction from the individual farmer, is concerned in conserving its natural resources and in producing the greatest possible amount of wealth. That is, in maintaining the soil fertility unimpaired and producing the maximum per acre. Thus the interest of the individual farmer and the interests of the naturalist has taken advantage of the nation as a whole are not opposed, so long as the farmer can spread his available labor over more acres than he can work at a maximum production. Those interests will not be reconciled so long as economic conditions tempt the farmer with inefficiency and costly labor, and costly fertilizers.

No Excuse for Slovenly Farming.

All this, however, does not excuse the careless and inefficient farmer. Two farmers live and work side by side. Both have the same number of acres, and the same amount of capital invested. Both have a fair knowledge of good methods is available. One of them directs his labor, arranges his crops, selects his stock, keeps them healthy and fertility, keeps his land clean, maintains his soil fertility, sells his produce to advantage, and succeeds. The other is haphazard. He has no "system," or wrong plans. His stock are poor in quality, and ill-fed. His fences are broken down and his land overrun with weeds. He is going behind year by year. We all know men of both types. The difference is a difference in farm management.—Professor Reynolds, O. A. College, Guelph.

Good Care Will Save Many Foals.

The best time to grow foals, and the time when they will make their largest gains is when they are being carried by their dams. Many farmers do not realize this, and begin feeding the mare a proper ration only after the foal is here. The brood mare, when in foal, should be fed a high protein ration, a ration which is rich in muscle and bone building material. This material is supplied in the form of oats, bran, and oil meal, or a combination of oats and clover or alfalfa hay as a roughage. As soon as the young foal arrives, see that he gets a good drink of his mother's first milk. This first milk or colostrum has purgative properties, and will usually clear the foal's intestines of the excrement accumulated prior to birth. If the digestive tract is not cleaned by the fore-milk, give the foal a tablespoonful of castor oil and a warm water and soap rectal injection.

Watch out for navel infection. If pus and disease germs get inside the body through the opening of the umbilical cord, a local infection or "joint ill" may develop and the foal be lost.

THE CURE OF RINGWORM

Disagreeable, Contagious Disease of Farm Animals.

The Symptoms Carefully Described —Treatment Carefully Applied Usually Successful—A Fly Spray —September Notes.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Ringworm is a contagious disease to which all classes of animals, including man, are liable.

Calves and young cattle appear to be more susceptible to the trouble than other animals, but no age renders an animal immune. It is generally a skin disease, and is due to the presence of a vegetable parasite, which is readily capable of being conveyed from one animal to another by direct contact, the hands of the attendant, pails, stable utensils, brushes, rubbers, saddles, blankets, the contact of one animal with the stalls, etc., of affected animals, etc.

Just like manner, curry-combs, brushes, rubbing cloths, etc., that are used on affected animals of any class, and used on other animals, become a fertile cause of infection.

Symptoms.

While any part of the animal may be the seat of the disease, the skin around the eyes and on the face, and on the neck and shoulders appear to be the favorite seat. The first symptom shown is usually an itchiness, which is followed by a slight formation of eruption, which soon assumes the appearance of little yellowish scabs of a circular shape, the mass scales forming a circular space; hence the term "ringworm." A variable number of these circular patches may be noticed on different parts of the body. They may be found since when fresh, but become lighter in color as they grow older; the hairs become brittle, some break off, and some become split. When the disease is not checked the affected areas become more numerous and the patient apparently suffers acutely from itchiness, and sometimes rubs against solid objects with such force as to cause bleeding. If a scale be removed and placed under surface examined by a magnifying glass, the parasite can be seen.

Treatment.

In order that the spread of the disease may be checked, it is necessary that great care be taken to avoid the conveyance of the virus from the diseased to healthy animals. Where practicable, it is well to remove all non-infectel animals to non-infected premises. If this cannot be done, the diseased animals should be isolated, and the premises in which they had been kept should be disinfected by thoroughly sweeping and dusting them after giving a thorough coat of an insecticide, as a 1 to 10 per cent. of one of the coal tar antiseptics or carbolic acid, or a coat of lot lime, as a 20 per cent. solution of bolic acid. This precaution is desirable on account of the virus lodging in stalls, bedding, etc., and infecting other animals.

Local treatment consist in moistening the scales with warm water and soap, or sweet oil, removing them by force, and painting the affected surfaces of the affected areas. It is good practice to burn these scales. An ointment made of one tincture of iodine, or an ointment made of two drams white hellebore mixed with an ounce of vaseline, or, in fact, any remedy, such as recommended above once or twice daily until cured.—J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

A Fly Spray.

A good fly spray can be made from 4½ quarts coal tar dip, 4½ quarts fish oil, 3 quarts coal oil, 3 quarts whale oil, and 1½ quarts of tar.

Dissolve 3 lbs. laundry soap in water, add the neck and back, apply the spray and bring the whole up to 30 gallons with lukewarm soft water. This spray will keep off the flies and mosquitoes for days if the animals from becoming harsh.

The cows should be sprayed twice a day—in the morning after milking and in the afternoon when in the barn for silage of green feed. Thirty gallons of mixture will spray 40 cows twice a day for ten days.

September Notes.

Peonies should be divided and reset during September or October.

Do not forget to lift some of the geraniums, salvia, astere, or other plants in the yard or garden. They will bloom in the window this winter.

A drain tile set over each plant is a good method of blanching celery. Celery for winter storage should not be blanched before putting in the cellar.

Plant tulips in the garden or border the last of September or early October. Tulips, narcissus, daffodils and hyacinths planted now in pots or boxes and put in a cool place will give good flowers next spring.

Place squash on a dry shelf in a room near the furnace or in a warm attic room. They must not be in a damp or frosty place. They will stand a great deal of heat and dry air, but little moisture. If you want squash or pumpkins to keep well, handle them carefully so they are not bruised.

Dahlias, cannas, gladioli, etc., should be dug and stored after the foliage has been killed by frost. The first part of October is usually the time.

Try to arrange a change of pasture for the sheep. Changing their pasture as frequently as possible minimizes losses through parasitic diseases.

Green tomatoes may be put under cover when frosty nights come and many will ripen.

Onions keep best in an airy, dry place. A moist cellar is not a good place. They decay quickly.

TAMING THE BIRDS.

Unique Experience of a Canadian Nature Lover.

Proof of the assertion that the wildest of wild life can be tamed, and that the feathered songsters of the woods and fields can be taught to answer the summons of man, is to be found at the little farm of Charles Caverly, near Aylmer, in Elgin County, Ontario. Bird lover, naturalist and wood-carver, Mr. Caverly has converted his home into a veritable museum of craftsmanship and natural history, and the grounds surrounding his home into a park such as a millionaire might envy. For people realize how easily most of the birds and smaller wild animals can be tamed to a degree of trustfulness toward human beings that is almost friendly. Mr. Caverly's little feathered friends do longer fear him, and will perch on his shoulder or will alight on his wrist and eat out of his hand. They swarm about the little farmhouse, fill the air with song, and live happily in the unique bird-houses built for them by the Canadian John Burroughs. Mr. Caverly accomplishes his will with the wild things by kindness and constant endeavor not to give cause for alarm.

The home of Mr. Caverly is situated in one of the most beautiful parts of Elgin County. It was originally part of a magnificent estate of 400 acres cleared from the forest by Mr. Caverly's grandfather. Its fertility is one of its big assets, but the beautiful surroundings cannot be over-estimated for that is what attracts the birds and squirrels, and Mr. Caverly's life is intimately associated with the little pensioners, so much so that he devotes hours every day in providing for their comfort and protection. All over his place Mr. Caverly has placed bird houses for robins or wrens and some for songsters of a rarer kind. For some years this man has not been an advocate of the shot-gun law for himself, and winter and summer has kept himself employed from 16 to 18 hours per day. The result of his industry is to be seen in every nook and corner of the house and everywhere throughout the garden and park surrounding it. His pigeons, his wild birds, and his black and grey squirrels need constant attention.

Although these squirrels are only eight weeks old, they are already orphans. Their parents were killed by trapping of a tree in the forest near Simcoe. They were discovered —two nests of them, one black and one grey—by a brother-in-law of Mr. Caverly, and were immediately brought to the naturalist's home. A nest was soon built, as much like the former one's possible, and Mr. Caverly undertook the task of feeding the little squirrels with a teaspoon. When they began to scamper about he built a box for them and they now add liveliness to the place by running everywhere about the park. Mr. Caverly is not alarmed at the prospect of having them with the birds, that when a robin laid its eggs in a nest in a fir tree near the house, a squirrel would climb up and part the branches without alarming the parent bird. Later on, when the young were hatched, the mother bird, as a matter of fact, would leave the nest and hop to a limb close by, allowing him to feed the gaping mouths of the baby birds without any sign of fear or distress.

The naturalist has taken advantage of his friendliness with the birds to make some close-up photographs of their homes and habits and has a very fine collection of such pictures in his house.

Evidence of Mr. Caverly's ability as a wood-worker is to be found in the farm house, where chairs and other furniture fashioned by the owner himself lend an air of distinction and originality to the place. His offers for the nicely-fashioned rush chairs and carved tables have been supplied Mr. Caverly to part with any of them.

Hundreds of visitors flock to the Caverly home, and a register kept by the owner contains the names of people from all over the world, including New Zealand, South Africa, and almost every part of the United States.—T. R. Elliott, in the Toronto Sunday World.

THE MISERY OF BACKACHE

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wasford, Ont.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache, and I also had a female weakness. I felt dizzy and nervous, and was without energy. I would force myself to do my work, and was always tired. Saw a Pinkham advertisement which induced me to take the Vegetable Compound, and my back gradually stopped aching and I felt lighter in spirits. I recommend the Vegetable Compound with pleasure to all I meet who complain as I did."—MILDRED BROOK, Wasford, Ont.

Woman's Precious Gift

The one who she should most zealously guard is her health, but she often neglects to do so in season until some illness begins to manifest itself and has fastened itself upon her. When so affected women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a remedy that has been wonderfully successful in restoring health to suffering women.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

SEEKING MAGNETIC POLE.

Scientific Expedition Starts for the Arctic Regions.

The discovery of the magnetic north pole or even the finding of bonds of union, other than that of gravitation, between the earth, the sister planets and our parasite moon may be the result of the scientific Arctic exploration that will be undertaken by the Macmillan Baffin Land Expedition that sailed in July for a stay of a year or more in the north.

The Carnegie Institution through the department of terrestrial magnetism with the co-operation of Canadian and American Government bureaus and universities has furnished the scientific equipment of the expedition, and has given two members of the expedition, G. D. Howe, jr., and E. H. G. Beaird, special trained in the scientific observations to be made simultaneously with other northerly stations established in some European countries and Canada in conjunction with the Amundsen Arctic expedition.

There is no telling what facts of science are hidden in the icy embraces of the Far North," declares Dr. Louis A. Bauer, director of the department of terrestrial magnetism of the Carnegie Institution. "The discovery of these secrets will not only be of scientific interest, but also of immediate benefit to the welfare of mankind.

"It is planned that for a period of eight to ten months continuous and systematic observations shall be made pertaining chiefly to the magnetism of the earth, the electrical and meteorological conditions of the atmosphere, and to polar lights. A sledge trip may also be attempted to the locality of the north magnetic pole, supposed to be near the Arctic coast of Boothia Felix, during which a systematic magnetic survey of the region may be carried out.

"The observations of polar lights will be of special interest," Dr. Bauer states. "Polar explorers have repeatedly furnished testimony and have recited experiences which apparently indicate that the polar-light rays, or beams, pass through the atmosphere with some down comparatively close to the earth's surface. The MacMillan Expedition will be equipped with special photographic appliances for settling the question as to the depth of penetration into our atmosphere of the auroral beams in polar regions and that it will be able to make a contribution to our knowledge which will undoubtedly help greatly in establishing a rational theory of polar lights."

Simpson-Reeve.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, on Wednesday last, at high noon, when Miss Katherine S. Reeve, daughter of Mrs. Reeve, of Ottawa, and Mr. John Milner Simpson, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Simpson, of Napanee, were united in matrimony. The Rev. J. H. H. Coleman officiated. The bride was given away by her grandfather, Mr. R. G. Wright. The bride looked very sweet in a smart blue suit with moleskin collar, and a mole-velvet hat, and carried ophelia roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. H. Schermerhorn, who also wore a pretty suit and carried sweetheart roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Harry Schermerhorn. Only the immediate relatives were present at the wedding service, and Mr. and Mrs. Simpson left immediately after the ceremony for Montreal and other places in the Province of Quebec.

Kenworthy-Baughan.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the Misses Emily and Alice Baughan, 55 Brinkerhoff Street, Jersey City, N. J., on Wednesday morning, October 5th, 1921, when their niece, Miss Mildred Caroline Baughan, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Kenworthy, of New York City. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. MacDonald, pastor of Emory Methodist church of Jersey City. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harold R. Baughan. A grey brocaded silk chiffon velvet gown, over tangerine satin was worn by the bride, and she carried a bridal bouquet of orchids and lily-of-the-valley. She was attended by her friend, Miss Hannah Reilley, who wore a blue and silver chiffon gown. The flower girl, little Miss Reta Smatheurst, wore pink, and carried a huge basket of pink rose buds. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Richard A. Kenworthy. The house was artistically decorated with palms, ferns, smilax and autumn flowers. Immediately following the wedding was the reception, after which dainty refreshments were served by a caterer. Mr. and Mrs. Kenworthy left for an extended tour of the United States and Canada. Upon their return they will reside in New York City.

Napanee Gaol.

The annual report of Napanee gaol shows that the number of prisoners during the past year was greater than for some years past. A new feature or the report is that there were no imprisonments for drunkenness, and only two for breaches of the O.T.A. The total days stay of all prisoners was 1437 days, divided 1143 for criminal offences, 294 for minor offences. The cost per day for rations, 3 meals, was 18.23 cents, or about six cents per meal. The total cost of maintenance of the gaol was $2017.61, of which amount the Province pays about 80 per cent.

Grim Provisions Made by Man In North of England.

"I bequeath all the property I die possessed of to H—— L——, now an infant, on the sole condition that when he comes of age he marries S—— H——, of S——."

In this brief formula a North of England murderer attempted to dispose of his property on the day before his execution.

Outwardly there was nothing to distinguish the will from those of many other occupants of the condemned cell, but to those who could read beneath the surface this was one of the grimes documents ever penned. The youth to whom the property of the condemned man was to pass was his illegitimate son, and the girl he was enjoined to marry was the daughter of the man he had killed.

The property turned out afterwards to include the greater part of the proceeds of the robbery that led up to the murder. Why the condemned man should have resorted to this strange and grim method of trying to right the wrong he had done was explained when it was found that he had been deeply affected during his trial by learning that his victim had left an orphan daughter who would be penniless unless she could become possessed in some way of the stolen property.

Restoration of the property without conditions would have been a more satisfactory way of undoing the wrong, but the accused man thought otherwise. The will was never carried into effect, because the authorities got to know in time that the "estate" included securities and jewels stolen from the man he had murdered, and these were handed over in trust for the orphan daughter.

Seddon, who was sentenced for the murder of Miss Barrow, spent a good deal of his time in preparing wills. He had them duly witnessed, only to tear them up later. One will directed that his property should be devoted to establishing his innocence, and gave details of the procedure he advised in order to collect new evidence.

"I realise that it is hopeless to look for vindication before the day appointed for my execution," he told the writer, "but I want to have my innocence established later for the sake of my family and the Order to which I belong."

Another will directed his property to go to the Masonic Orphanage, and one assigned the greater part of his estate to any firm of private inquiry agents who could produce satisfactory evidence to clear his memory.

Dickman, who was hanged for the murder of Mr. Nesbitt on the North-eastern Railway, prepared a will which consisted of one short sentence, leaving all he possessed to "My dear wife, to whom I have been a trial." He followed this up with a long manifesto against gambling, which he declared to have been the bane of his life. He wanted this published to the world.

Premier Under Fire.

Australia's Premier, the Rt. Hon. W. M. Hughes, tells an amusing story of his first election. He was returned for the Lang Division of Sydney in 1894, after a contest in which feeling ran high on both sides.

When the result of the poll was announced his chairman shouted to him, "Bill, you're in; run like the deuce."

Mr. Hughes bolted. He was followed by a gang of frantic political opponents. Finally he took refuge in the pulpit of a chapel, where friends and enemies waged a furious battle.

During a lull in the storm Mr. Hughes popped his head over the top of the pulpit and started to speak. He got as far as "Gentleman, this is the proudest——" when a bar of iron whizzed past his ear, and forced him to take cover again.

"Funny-Bone" Facts.

To discover the connection between the small bone of the arm which, when struck, produces a feeling of pain which is far from amusing, and the name "funny-bone," one has to examine the anatomical terms for the bones in this section of the body.

The technical name for the "funny-bone" is the "inner condoyle of the humerus," and it is a play upon the latter word which led to the adoption of the term "funny," a very old joke of first-year medical students being, "Why is the funny-bone so called"—Because is borders on the humerus." ~

The antiquity of this pun is evident from a passage in the Ingoldsby Legends":—

"They have pulled you flat on your back!
And they smack and they whack
Till your funny-bones crack
As if you were stretched on the rack."

CUTS TO BE ACCEPTED

Railwaymen Accept Less Wages for the Time Being.

Reductions Are to Stand Subject to Revision at Further Conference—This Tentative Agreement Was Reached at Night Session In Montreal After All Hope Had Been Abandoned.

MONTREAL, Oct. 10.—After 10 days of argument and conference with the Commission of Conciliation and Investigation, headed by Mr. Justice F. S. Maclennan, chairman, the representatives of the brotherhoods and railway managements came to a provisional agreement late Saturday evening, under which the men agree that the reductions in pay, ranging from 10 to 12 per cent., put into force last July, shall be continued tentatively.

Provision, however, is made for further conferences as to this, with the understanding that if the final decision is that the wages should be reduced the reduction is to be made. Should, however, the wage cut be less than that enforced by the companies, the latter will have to refund the difference, between the reduction authorized and that actually in force. If more, no refund will be collectable by the railways.

The strong features of the provisional arrangement are that the brotherhoods have abandoned their position to the effect that the reduction was illegal, and have agreed to continue negotiations on the main issue. The railways have also made certain concessions, and by a mutual system of compromise the impasse which threatened last week has been avoided, so that the way is now clear for a resumption of peace negotiations, with an agreement duly signed as a basis for the truce.

Rules and working conditions were expressly left out of the agreement, and it was provided that there should be no change in these respects before 30 days after January 1, 1922. After that date each company, individually, will have to negotiate as to these rules with its own men, and if there is disagreement in that regard there will probably be separate boards appointed for each company. The dropping of the wage question for the time being is a decided concession by the companies.

In the meantime the members of the Commission of Conciliation and Investigation will send in their report, based on the agreement reached, and the members of the Joint Conference Committee will return to their respective districts, there to make reports, on which the conduct of the future negotiations will be based.

PEACE MISSION ARRIVES.

Sinn Feiners Given Enthusiastic Welcome In London.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Twenty thousand persons, frantically cheering, London Irishmen and women, packed for blocks around Euston Station, welcomed the Sinn Fein plenipotentiaries to the Irish conference in London, when they arrived from Dublin Saturday night.

The men and women fought to kiss the hands and touch the garments of the leaders of the "republic," who motored to their headquarters through streets lined with crowds.

The delegation is headed by Arthur Griffiths, and includes R. C. Barton, E. J. Duggan and Gavan Duffy. Michael Collins, who is a delegate, detained in Dublin, "due to family reasons." De Valera did not accompany the delegates and will not be a member of the delegation, though it is understood he may come to London unostentatiously later in order to be near the conference and confer with the delegates.

The arrival at Euston station was the scene of a remarkable demonstration. It was three weeks ago that thousands of clamoring unemployed waved the Red flag as bands played the "Internationale" when the London Labor Mayors departed for Gairloch. Saturday night this same hollow square inside Euston station buildings was jammed again with thousands of people who in the dim twilight sang the "soldiers' song" of the Irish republican army as kilt-clad bagpipes played the shrill war pipes.

The cordon of police surrounding the station approaches good-naturedly shoved back the crowd, blandly ignoring the hordes of harp and green ribbon vendors.

BANDITS ROBBED MAIL

Large Reward Offered for Capture, Dead or Alive.

Hunt is Now In Progress for Men Who Held Up Canadian Mail Wagon In Detroit—Trunk Was Discovered, Filled With Mutilated Sacks, Rifled Envelopes and Packages—Foreigners Suspected.

DETROIT, Oct. 10.—Posting of $20,000 reward by the United States Post Office Department for the capture of the outlaws, "dead or alive"; announcement by the Windsor post office that no money shipments would be accepted in the future for night delivery to Detroit, and official admission that two of the 72 pieces of registered mail taken contained $4,000 in currency, were among today's developments in the hunt for the robbers of a Royal Canadian mail wagon in Wayne street, Friday night.

That the hold-up was engineered and carried out by four members of Detroit's foreign colony was stated Sunday night by Chief of Detectives Edward H. Fry, following the discovery early Sunday morning of a trunk stuffed with mutilated mail sacks, rifled envelopes and packages.

The trunk, an old-fashioned affair with oval top and tin sides, was typically a foreign one. Its lock was broken off and its hinges had been nailed two staples and two hinges. At police headquarters the trunk was given a careful examination and it is believed that the bandits picked up on it may give the police the clue they are seeking. The trunk will be turned over to the postal authorities.

The trunk was found in the trunk had been opened systematically regardless of their outside markings, in an effort to get at valuables and money available. The lock was smashed on the ordinary mail sacks but the registered mail was cut open carefully with a knife.

Several medals from the Department of Militia and Defence at Ottawa addressed to Americans who had served with Canadian forces overseas, had been taken, the authorities ascertained. One of these packages, however, escaped the robbers' eyes. It was addressed to Lieut. Edward R. Greenough, of Louisville, Ky.

Post office inspectors and local detectives combed the Italian section Sunday following the discovery of the trunk. One man, Carl Grebe, 24 years old, who was arrested Saturday, was looked over by Windsor and Detroit police and also by McAuley, the driver of the mail wagon, but none could remember having seen him before.

The first arrest in connection with the robbery was made at 5.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when the police took into custody Carl Grece, 34 years old, 160 Montcalm street. He was locked up on a charge of "violating United States code."

The police claim Grece, who said he was a railroad employe, was definitely implicated in the Toledo post office robbery and they believe he may know something of Friday night's crime.

Joseph P. Casgrain, Windsor postmaster, professed indignation over reports that the loss would run into many thousands of dollars. He said a Government cheque showed that the pouches contained only two money packages. One held $1,000 sent by a Wichita bank to the First and Old Detroit National Bank, and the other was of $3,000 consigned by Ambrathurg to the Wayne County and Home Savings Bank, he declared.

The Government tabulation, however, accounted for only these two of the 72 pieces which the stolen registered mail, and other officials said the fixing of values on the remaining 70 pieces would undoubtedly increase the value of the loot by thousands of dollars.

While Windsor postal officials told their story of the bulk of the stolen registered mail was unnegotiable, Detroit postal men expressed the belief that the wish was father to the thought and that there was no way of telling as yet whether the missing parcels were negotiable.

All the large postal stations in Canada were asked to close on Saturday on packages despatched by them to Windsor on the royal mail train which left the Windsor at 9.35 o'clock Friday evening. A considerable quantity of that mail made up the load of the mail wagon which was rifled.

While Dominion postal officials were trying to arrive at some exact value of the stolen property, police officials on both sides of the river sought unsuccessfully for the slightest lead in tracking down the four highwaymen implicated in the hold-up.

Ferry officials were asked to supply a list of the license numbers of all automobiles which crossed the river for two hours preceding the hold-up, on the theory that the assailants of Macauley, the Royal mail messenger, followed him from the Canadian side.

Had Narrow Escape.

CASTLE BLAYNEY, Ireland, Oct. 10.—John McCabe, a former soldier, has been awarded £4,000 as compensation for injuries inflicted by the Irish republican army." According to the evidence, he was imprisoned in a cottage, where he was chained.

A priest was sent for and the last rites administered. Then McCabe was taken outside and three bullets were fired at him. He was left for dead, but survived, and despite his wounds and bonds, managed to crawl to a stable where he was discovered. A card was pinned to his body inscribed: "Convicted spy. Beware, I.R.A."

The quarter sessions awarded the damages, which, it is believed, will fall on the taxpayers of the district.

Soviet Need Codfish.

Negotiations for the purchase by the Russian Soviet Government of twenty thousand tons of salt codfish have been opened between a Soviet Commissioner in London and the Newfoundland Government. This would represent about one-quarter of the year's catch in Newfoundland.

The Russian Government has offered to pay from ten to twenty per cent. of the price in cash and the balance in notes payable from three to five years hence.

The Chinese republic appropriates $4,000,000 a year for its imperial court.

WENT DOWN IN FOG.

Sixteen People Drowned as Result of Double Collision.

BELFAST, Oct. 10.—Damaged by one vessel in a dense fog off the southwest coast of Scotland and then sunk by another coming to its aid, was the fate early Sunday morning of the Laird Line steamer Rowan, plying between Glasgow and Dublin. Thirteen of the Rowan's crew and three passengers are missing. Two passengers died after being rescued by vessels which responded to the wireless S.O.S. call.

An official statement says that the Rowan carried 93 persons, including the crew, 77 of whom are accounted for by the four vessels which went to the Rowan's assistance.

Aboard the Rowan was the "American Southern Syncopated Orchestra," composed largely of colored players, who had been touring this side of the water since 1919. One of the men who died after being taken out of the sea was Pete Robinson, the drummer of the orchestra.

The accident was due to a double collision in the North channel off Corsewall Point. The Rowan first collided with the United States steamer West Camak, both of them being damaged. The West Camak stood by with forepeak full of water, meanwhile sending out wireless calls for aid. The Glen Isla or Glen Malcolm responded, but in the confusion due to the heavy fog, ran into the disabled Rowan, which sank immediately.

The West Camak helped in the rescue work, afterward putting into Glasgow with 26 survivors. Captain Donald Brown, of Glasgow, is reported to have gone down with the Rowan. Three other vessels also answered the call and completed the work of rescue as far as it was possible.

The Clan Malcolm, which rammed the Rowan amidships, was damaged only slightly.

The syncopated orchestra, which went to London in May, 1919, gave performances there and vicinity until two months ago, when they made a tour of Scotland. There were originally 12 members, about 15 of them British players.

DOCTOR LOST IN WILDS.

Search In Progress for Prominent Toronto Man.

FORT WILLIAM, Oct. 10.—The remains of a porcupine, believed killed for food by Dr. Graham Chambers, Toronto physician, who is lost in the bush north of Jellicoe, 130 miles west of Fort William, had led searchers to believe Chambers is still alive. Two Indian guides and twelve Indians are scouring the five-mile-square tract of bush surrounding Clearwater Lake, where the doctor's camp is situated.

The guides are basing their hopes on the fact that wild animals will seldom, if ever, kill porcupine for food at this time of year, when all kinds of game are abundant.

Mrs. Chambers, who is with friends in Fort Frances, has faith that her husband will be found soon.

On September 29 Dr. Chambers, with his nephew, started out on a camping trip to Eye Lake, 15 miles Clearwater Lake, over a good trail. Before reaching Eye Lake the nephew decided to turn back to Jellicoe, as Chambers said that he would keep on. After retracing the trail for some time, the nephew turned back after Dr. Chambers. He kept to the path to Eye Lake, but could not find any trace of his uncle. Indian guides succeeded in following the trail for some distance past Eye Lake, where the trail was lost on rocky ground. The ground around Eye Lake is pitted with old mining shafts, many of which are filled with water.

Rebel Band Active.

SIMLA, British India, Oct. 10.—Official advices from Madras report that a large rebel band north of Mannaraghat is proceeding to Malabar.

The working committee of the National Congress and the Caliphate of Workers at Bombay adopted a resolution advocating a sympathetic strike throughout India on the day the Prince of Wales arrives in Bombay.

The resolution urges provincial committees to arrange a boycott in the various cities which the prince visits. The committee expressed the opinion that the National Congress should inform neighboring and other states that the Government of India, "whose policy traditionally is guided by considerations looking more to holding India under subjection than to protecting her borders," in no way represented Indian opinion, and that India, as a self-governing state, did not intend to establish "undesirable" trade relations.

MONTREAL, Oct. 10.—A Radical Sunday School where children may be instructed in the principles of the Communist movement is the latest proposal of the management of the Montreal Labor Temple. Maxwell Armstrong, Toronto, has joined the college staff.

United States' Crop.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. — This year's crop production, as forecast by the U. S. Department of Agriculture Saturday, in its monthly crop report, bears the estimates on conditions prevailing October 1, follows:

Spring wheat, 196,776,000 bushels.

All wheat, 740,683,000 bushels.

Corn, 3,163,000 bushels.

"Daredevil" Reese Called.

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 10.—In full view of 5,000 spectators who stood around the Lakeview aerodrome and thousands more who had taken up positions on downtown buildings and convenient streets, "Daredevil" Lloyd Reese, a New Yorker, fell 400 feet to his death from the upper wing of a Curtiss biplane Saturday afternoon while attempting to grasp a rope ladder which was suspended from another airplane passing over.

Reese had undertaken with the Aerial Transit Co., of Yorkton, Sask., to give an exhibition of passing from one machine to another in mid-air. He had the reputation of having performed the same act many times before, but on this occasion his hand slipped as he reached the second rung of the ladder and he fell after passing clear of the machine on which he was standing.

Found Illicit Still.

HORNE PAYNE, Algoma, Oct. 10.—C. N. R. special agents, Capt. J. J. Graham and B. Anderson, of Horne Payne, have found an illicit still north of Foleyet, captured an illicit still about three miles north of Agate on Friday morning. The plant was in full-up-to-date order, capable of turning 35 gallons of whiskey per day, and had been in operation for some time to the detriment of the laborers working on the C. N. R. line. The detectives were compelled to worm their way through dense brush and swamp for a mile and a half to find the spot, Thomas Cloutier, was brought before Magistrate Brodie, of Sudbury, and a fine of $300 and costs or six months in jail imposed. The outfit consisted of a complete still, several barrels of mash and beer, which was destroyed by the officers.

Ranchers Safeguarded.

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—Those holding grazing leases in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and the Peace River block, British Columbia, are now entitled to four years' notice, in the event of their not desiring to relinquish the land, instead of the present theretofore. The regulation has been made by Order-in-Council. This is a change in the law to enable big stock to maturity or to dispose of them to advantage.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Reuter's correspondent at Sydney cables that James Dooley, Deputy Premier of New South Wales, has been elected leader of the Labor Parliamentary Labor party, and has been commissioned to form a Ministry to succeed that of the late Hon. John Storey.

All the Ryan Ministry will retain portfolios, and the only additional member of the Cabinet will be Carlo Camillo Lazzarini.

Girl's Body Found In Water.

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 10.—The body of Miss Grace Herrington, aged 24, was found Friday in three feet of water in the St. Lawrence river back of the house of Geo. M. Stone, of Louisville. The body was found by Mrs. Stone's daughter. Free from the end of a small dock, by Mr. Stone, who were passing in a motor-boat. Autopsy showed that death was due to drowning.

Italy Only a Spectator.

ROME, Oct. 10.—Although the names of the Italian delegates to the Washington conference are not known as yet, it is believed Baron Sidney Sonnino or Senator Tommaso Tittoni will be the chief plenipotentiary, with Count Sforza and Ambassador Bonin Longare as the others. As far as Italy's policy is concerned, she was largely disarmed even before President Harding's invitation to participate was received, and she cannot have more than a spectator's part at the Far Eastern discussion.

New Status to Burma.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A Reuter cable from Simla says the Government of India has accepted a motion that Burma is to be constituted a governor's province under the Government of India Act of 1919, but with the modification that the minimum percentage of elected members of the Legislative Council shall be sixty instead of seventy, as in the Indian provinces, and that the total strength of the council shall be 92.

"You're a fine pair," snarled Gonzale when the door had closed. "A fine pair to take my salary money and then stand by and see me strangled."

"You're not strangled yet," said O'Neill. He came slowly toward his employer, like a cat stalking a bird. "Did you get my emphasis on the word yet?"

Gonzale paled beneath his lemon skin and got behind a desk.

"Now, boys," he pleaded, "I didn't mean anything. I'll be frank with you—I have been a little indiscreet here. But that's all over now. It would be dangerous to try any more—deals at present. And I want you to stay on here until I can get new men in your places."

"Save your breath," said O'Neill through his teeth.

"Your work has been excellent—excellent," went on Gonzale hastily. "I feel I am not paying you enough. Stay over to us. We'll bundle him into our launch and run off out of sight behind Tarragona island. Then let Trimmer search to his heart's content. When he gets tired and quits signal us by hanging a red lantern in the bow."

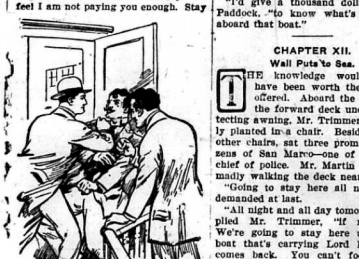
Martin Wall smiled broadly.

"Not bad for an amateur kidnaper," he said. "Will I turn George over to you? Will a duck swim? A good idea."

In the kidnaping George put up a lively fight. Once he slipped and fell, his three captors on top of him, and at that moment Minot felt a terrific tugging at his coat. But the odds were three to one against George Harrowby, and finally he was dragged and pushed into the launch. Paddock started the engine, and that odd boat load drew away from the Lileth.

Hours passed and no red light from the Lileth. It rained in torrents.

"I'd give a thousand dollars," said Paddock, "to know what's going on aboard that boat."



Minot and His Captive Slid Back and Forth Across the Floor.

CHAPTER XII.
Wall Puts to Sea.

THE knowledge would hardly have been worth the price he offered. Aboard the Lileth, on the forward deck under a protecting awning, Mr. Trimmer sat firmly planted in a chair. Beside him, in other chairs, sat three prominent citizens of San Marco—one of them the chief of police. Mr. Martin Wall was madly walking the deck near by.

"Going to stay here all night?" he demanded at last.

"All night and all day tomorrow," replied Mr. Trimmer, "if necessary. We're going to stay here until that boat that's carrying Lord Harrowby comes back. You can't fool Henry Trimmer."

"There isn't any such boat!" flared Martin Wall.

"Tell it to the marines," remarked Trimmer, lighting a fresh cigar.

Just as well that the three shivering figures huddled in the bench on the heaving bosom of the waters could not see this picture. Mr. Wall looked out at the rain and shivered himself.

Eleven-thirty came. And 12. Two more hours from Mr. Paddock's store went to the discovery of these sad facts. Soaked to the skin, glum, silent, the three on the waters sat staring at the unresponsive Lileth. The rain was falling now in a fine drizzle.

"I suppose," Paddock remarked, "we stay here until morning."

"We might try landing on Tarragona," said Minot.

"We might try jumping into the ocean, too," responded Paddock through chattering teeth.

"Murder," droned poor old George. "that's what it'll be."

At 1 o'clock the three wet watchers beheld unusual things. Smoke began to belch from the Lileth's funnels. Her siren sounded.

"She's steaming out!" cried Minot. "She's steaming out to sea!"—

And sure enough the graceful yacht began to move—out past Tarragona island, out toward the open sea.

Once more Paddock started his faithful engine, and, hallooing madly, the three set out in pursuit. Not yet had the Lileth struck its gait, and in fifteen minutes they were alongside. Martin Wall, beholding them from the deck, had a rather unexpected attack of pity and stopped his engines. The three limp watchers were taken aboard.

"Wha—what does this mean?" chattered Minot.

"You poor devils!" said Martin Wall. "Come and have a drink. Mean?" He paused. "It means that the only way I could get rid of our friend Trimmer was to set out for New York."

"She's steaming out to sea!"

"For New York?" cried Minot, standing glass in hand.

"Yes. Came on board, Trimmer did, searched the boat and then declared I'd shipped George away until his visit should be over. So he and his friends—one of them the chief of police, by the way—sat down to wait for your return. Gad! I thought of you out in that rain—sat and sat and sat. What could I do?"

"To Trimmer, the brute!" said Paddock, raising his glass.

"Finally I had an idea. I had the boys pull up anchor and start the engines. Trimmer wanted to know the answer. 'Leaving for New York tonight,' I said. 'Want to come along?' He wasn't sure whether he would go or not, but his friends were sure they wouldn't. Put up an awful howl, and just before we got under way Mr. Trimmer and party crawled into their rowboat and splashed back to San Marco."

"Well, what now?" asked Minot. "I've made up my mind," said Wall. "Been intending to go back north for some time, and now that I've started I guess I'll keep on going."

"Splendid," cried Minot. "And you'll take Mr. George Harrowby with you?"

Mr. Wall seemed in excellent spirits. He slapped Minot on the back.

"If you say so, of course. Don't know exactly what they can do to us, but I think George needs the sea air. How about it, your lordship?"

Poor old George, drooping as he had never drooped before, looked wearily into Wall's eyes.

"What's the use?" he said. "Fight's all gone out of me. Losing interest in what's next. Two hours on that blooming ocean with the rain soaking in—I'm going to bed. I don't care what becomes of me."

And he sloshed away to his cabin.

"Well, boys, I'm afraid we'll have to put you off," said Martin Wall. "Glad to have met both of you. Some time in New York we may run into each other again."

He shook hands genially, and the two young men dropped once more into that unhappy launch. As they sped toward the shore the Lileth, behind them, was heading for the open sea.

"Sorry if I've seemed to have a grouch tonight," said Paddock as they walked up the deserted avenue toward the hotel. "But these Florida rainstorms aren't the pleasantest things to wear next to one's skin. I apologize, Dick."

"Nonsense," Minot answered. "Old Job himself would have frowned a bit if he'd been through what you have tonight. It was my fault for getting you into it"—

"Forget it," Paddock said. "Well, it looks like a wedding, old man. The letters home again and George Harrowby headed for New York—a three days' trip. Nothing to hinder now. Have you thought of that?"

"I don't want to think," said Minot gloomily. "Good night, old man."

Paddock sped up the stairs to his room, which was on the second floor, and Minot turned toward the elevator. At that moment he saw approaching him through the deserted lobby Mr. Jim O'Malley, the house detective of the De la Pax.

"Can we see you a minute in the office, Mr. Minot?" he asked.

"Certainly," Minot answered. "But —I'm soaked through—was out in all that rain"—

"Too bad," said O'Malley, with a sympathetic glance. "We won't keep you but a minute"—

He led the way, and, wondering, Minot followed. In the tiny office of the hotel manager a bullet headed man stood waiting.

"My friend, Mr. Huntley of the secret service," O'Malley explained. "Awful sorry that this should happen, Mr. Minot, but we got to search you."

"Search me! For what?" Minot cried.

And in a dash he knew. Through that wild night he had not once thought of it. But it was still in his inside coat pocket, of course. Chain Lightning's collar!

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"That's what they all say," grunted Huntley. "Come here, my boy. Say, you're pretty wet. And shivering! Better have a warm bath and a drink. Turn around, please. Ah"—

With practiced fingers the detective explored rapidly Mr. Minot's person and pockets. The victim of the search stood limp, helpless. What could he do? There was no escape. It was all up now. For whatever reason they desired Chain Lightning's collar they could not fail to have it in another minute.

Side pockets—trousers pockets—now! The inner coat pocket! Its contents were in the detective's hand. Minot stared down. A little gasp escaped him.

The envelope that held Chain Lightning's collar was not among them!

Two minutes later Huntley, pursued; then, with an oath of disappointment, he turned to O'Malley.

"Hasn't got it!" he announced.

Minot swept aside the profuse apologies of the hotel detective and somehow got out of the room. In a daze, he sought 389. He didn't have it—didn't have Chain Lightning's collar! Who did?

It was while he sat steaming in a hot bath that an idea came to him. The struggle on the deck of the Lileth, with Martin Wall panting at his side. The tug on his coat as they all went down together. The genial sprits of Wall thereafter. The sudden start for New York.

No question about it—Chain Lightning's collar was well out at sea now.

And yet why had Wall stopped to take the occupants of the launch aboard?

As completely at sea as he had been that night, which was more or less at sea, Minot returned to his room. It was after 3 o'clock. He turned out his lights and sought his bed.

The sun was bright outside his windows when he was aroused by a knock.

"What is it?" he cried.

"A package for you, sir," said a bellboy's voice.

He slipped one arm outside his door to receive it, a neat little bundle, securely tied, with his name written on the wrappings. Sleepily he undid the cord and took out—an envelope.

He was no longer sleepy. He held the envelope open over his bed. Chain Lightning's collar tumbled, gleaming, upon the white sheet!

Also in the package was a note, which Minot read breathlessly:

Dear Mr. Minot:

I have decided not to go north after all, and am back in the harbor with the Lileth. As I expect Trimmer at any moment I have sent George over to Tarragona island in charge of two sailormen for the day. Cordially, MARTIN WALL.

P. S.—You dropped the inclosed in the scuffle on the boat last night.

At 10 o'clock that Saturday morning Lord Harrowby was engrossed in the ceremony of breakfast in his rooms. For the occasion he wore an orange and purple dressing gown with a floral design no botanist could have sanctioned—the sort of dressing gown that Arnold Bennett, had he seen it, would have made a leading character in a novel. He was cheerful, was Harrowby, and as he glanced through an old copy of the London Times he made strange noises in his throat, under the impression that he was humming a musical comedy chorus.

There was a knock, and Harrowby cried, "Come in." Mr. Minot, fresh as the morning and nowhere near so hot entered.

"Feeling pretty satisfied with life I'll wager," Minot suggested.

"My dear chap, stay as—as a rolling Harrowby replied.

"Snatch your last giggle," said Minot not. "Have one final laugh and make it a good one. Then wake up."

"Wake up? Why, I am awake"—

"Oh, no, you're dreaming on a bed of roses. Listen! Martin Wall dined go north with the impostor after all! Changed his mind. Look!"

And Minot tossed something on the table just abaft his lordship's eggs.

"The devil! Chain Lightning's collar!" cried Harrowby.

"Back to its original storage vault," said Minot. "What is this, Harrowby—a Drury Lane melodrama?"

"My word! I can't make it out."

"Can't you? Got the necklace back this morning with a note from Martin Wall saying I dropped it last night in the scrap on the deck of the Lileth."

"Confound the thing!" sighed Harrowby, staring morosely at the diamonds.

"My first impulse," said Minot, "is to hand the necklace back to you and gracefully withdraw. But of course I'm here to look after Jephson's interests"—

"Naturally," put in Harrowby quickly. "And let me tell you that should this necklace be found before the wedding Jephson is practically certain to pay that policy. I think you'd better keep it. They're not likely to search you again. If I took it, dear old chap, they search me every little while."

"You didn't steal this, did you?" Minot asked.

"Of course not." Harrowby flushed a delicate pink. "It belongs in our family—has for years. Everybody knows that."

"Well, what is the trouble?"

"I'll explain it all later. There's really nothing dishonorable as men of the world look at such things. I give you my word that you can serve Mr. Jephson best by keeping the necklace for the present and seeing to it that it does not fall into the hands of the men who are looking for it."

Minot sat staring gloomily ahead of him. Then he reached out, took up the necklace and restored it to his pocket.

"Oh, very well," he said. "If I'm sent to jail tell Thacker I went singing an epithalamium." He rose.

"By the way," Harrowby remarked, "I'm giving a little dinner tonight at the Manhattan club. May I count on you?"

"Surely," Minot smiled. "I'll be there wearing our necklace."

"My dear fellow—ah, I see you mean it pleasantly. Wear it by all means."

Minot passed from the eccentric bloom of that dressing gown to the more authentic flowers of the Florida outdoors. In the plaza he met Cynthia Meyrick, rival candidate to the morning in its glory.

"Why did you kidnap—Mr. Trimmer's—friend?"

"Matrimony," she said, "is more trouble than it seems on a moonlit night under the palms. I've never been so busy in my life. By the way, two of my bridesmaids arrived from New York last night. Lovely girls, both of them. But I forget."

"Forget what?"

"Your young heart is already ensnared, isn't it?"

"Yes," replied Minot fervently, "it is. But no matter. Tell me about your preparations for the wedding. I should like to enjoy the thrill of it by proxy."

"How like a man—wants all the thrill and none of the bother. It's dreadfully hard staging a wedding way down here a thousand miles from everything. But my gown came last night from Paris. Can you imagine the thrill of that?"

"Only faintly."

"How stupid being a man must be."

"And how glorious being a girl, with man only an afterthought even at wedding time."

"Poor Harrowby! He keeps in the limelight fairly well, however." They walked along a moment in silence. "I've wondered," she said at length, "Why did you kidnap—Mr. Trimmer's—friend?"

"Because"—

"Yes?" eagerly.

Minot looked at her, and something rose in his throat to choke him.

"I can't tell you," he said. "It is the fault of—the master of the show. I'm only the pawn, the baffled, raging, unhappy little pawn. That's all I can tell you. You—you were speaking of your wedding gown?"

"A present from Aunt Mary," she answered, a strange tenderness in her tone. "For a good little girl who's caught a lord."

"A charming little girl," said Minot softly. "May I say that?"

"Yes"—her brown eyes glowed—"I'm glad—to have you say it. I go in here. Goodby—Mr. Kidnaper."

CHAPTER XIII.
Who's Who In England.

THE remainder of the day passed pleasantly. Dick Minot was lost indeed, for seemingly there were no more doughty deeds to be done in the name of Jephson. The Gaiety lady was gone; her letters were in the hands of the man who had written them. The claimant to the title languished among the alligators of Tarragona, a prisoner. Trimmer appeared to be balled. Bridesmaids arrived. Tan wedding gown appeared. It looked like smooth sailing now.

Jack Paddock, met for a moment late in the afternoon, announced airily:

"By the way, the Duke and Duchess of Lismore have come. You know—the sausage lady and her captive. My word, you should see her! A wardrobe to draw tears of envy from a theatrical star. Fifty costly necklaces—and only one neck!"

"Tragic," smiled Minot.

"Funny thing has happened," Paddock whispered. "I met the duchess once abroad. She sent for me this noon and almost bowled me over. Seems she's heard of Mrs. Bruce as the wittiest woman in San Marco, and she's jealous. 'You're a clever boy,' says her ladyship to me. 'Coach me up so I can outshine Mrs. Bruce.'"

"Good heavens, Jack! You wouldn't try to sell 'em both dialogue?"

"Why not? Play one against the other. Make 'em keener for my goods. I've got a notion to clean up here quick and then go back to the real stuff. That little girl from the middle west—I've forgot all about her, of course. But, speaking of cleaning up, I'm thinking of it, Dick, my boy. Yes, I believe I'll take them both on—secretly, of course. It means hard work for me, but when one loves one's art no service seems too tough."

"You're hopeless," Minot groaned.

"Say not so," laughed Paddock and went away humming a frivolous tune.

The twenty-four hours that followed were hours of anxiety for Minot. Lord Harrowby having lost money at the gaming table borrowed Chain Lightning's string of pearls from Minot—and tried in vain to get a loan on it from Tom Stacy. Bill Huntley, a custom house detective from New York, found the necklace in Harrowby's pocket and arrested him because the duty on the necklace had not been paid. Spencer Meyrick, in a rage, sought Harrowby.

"I've talked matters over with Cynthia. The marriage is off for good!" he declared. "This is the last straw. Good night and goodby!"

Moved by an inspiration, Minot suggested to the detective that possibly the jewels were not genuine. Much to Lord Harrowby's surprise, apparently, the detective declared that the jewels were "fine old bottle glass."

"I know the governor has been financially embarrassed," Harrowby explained to Cynthia, "but I never suspected him of this."

Spencer Meyrick and Cynthia reluctantly agreed to let the wedding occur as scheduled. Immediately thereafter Mr. Trimmer announced that he had found the kidnaped George and brought him back with him. He demanded that Lord Harrowby see George.

* * * *

"What's the matter with you?" Seated in the lobby of the De la Pax on Sunday morning, Mr. Trimmer turned a disapproving eye upon the lank Englishman at his side as he made this query. And his question was not without good foundation, for the aspirant to the title of Lord Harrowby was at the moment a jelly quaking with fear.

"Fawncy meeting you after all these years," said poor old George in an uncertain treble.

"Come, come!" cried Mr. Trimmer. "Put a little more authority into your voice. You can't walk up and claim your rights with your knees dancing the tango. This is the moment we've been looking forward to. Act determined. Walk into that room upstairs as though you were walking into Rakedale hall to take charge of it."

"Allan, don't you know me? I'm your brother George," went on the Englishman, intent on rehearsing.

"More like it," said Trimmer. "Put the fire into it. You're not expecting a thrashing, you know. You're expecting the title and recognition that belong to you. I wish I was the real Lord Harrowby. I guess I'd show 'em a thing or two."

"I wish you was," agreed poor old George sadly. "Somehow I don't seem to have the spirit I used to have."

In Lord Harrowby's suit that gentleman sat in considerable nervousness, awaiting the undesired encounter. With him sat Miss Meyrick and her father, whom he had thought it necessary to invite to witness the ordeal. Richard Minot uneasily paced the floor, avoiding as much as possible the glances of Miss Meyrick's brown eyes. Ten o'clock was upon him, and Mr. Minot was no nearer a plan of action than he had been the preceding night.

Every good press agent is got without a live theatrical sense, and Mr. Trimmer was no exception. He left his trembling claimant in the entrance hall and strode into the room.

"Good morning," he said briefly. "Here we are, on time to the minute. Ah! I beg your pardon!"

Lord Harrowby performed brief introductions, which Mr. Trimmer effusively acknowledged. Then he turned dramatically toward his lordship.

"Out here in the hallway stands a poor, broken creature," he began. "Your own flesh and blood, Allan Harrowby." Obviously Mr. Trimmer had prepared speeches for himself as well as for poor old George. "For twenty odd and impecunious years," he went on, "this man has been denied his just heritage. We are here this morning to perform a duty"—

"My dear fellow," broke in Harrowby wearily, "why should you inflict oratory upon us? Bring in this—er—gentleman."

"That I will," replied Trimmer heartily. "And when you have heard his story, digested his evidence, I am sure"—

"Yes, yes. Bring him in."

Mr. Trimmer stepped to the door. He beckoned. A very reluctant figure shuffled in. George's face was green, with fright. His knees rattled together. He made altogether a ludicrous picture, and Mr. Trimmer himself noted this with sinking heart.

"Allow me," said Trimmer theatrically. "George, Lord Harrowby!"

George cleared his throat, but did not succeed in dislodging his heart, which was there at the moment.

"Fawncy seeing you after all these years," he mumbled weakly to no one in particular.

"Speak up!" said Spencer Meyrick sharply.

"Who is it you're talking to?"

"To him," explained George, nodding toward Lord Harrowby. "To my brother Allan. Don't you know me, Allan? Don't you know"—

He stopped. An expression of surprise and relief swept over his worried face. He turned triumphantly to Trimmer.

"I don't have to prove who I am to him," he announced.

"Why don't you?" demanded Trimmer in alarm.

"Because he can't, I fancy," put in Lord Harrowby.

"No," said George slowly, "because I never saw him before in all my life."

"Ah, you admit it!" cried Allan Harrowby, with relief.

"Of course I do," replied George. "I never saw you before in my life."

"And you've never been at Rakedale Hall, have you?" Lord Harrowby demanded.

"Here—wait a minute!" shouted Trimmer, in a panic.

"Oh, yes, I've been at Rakedale Hall," said the claimant firmly. "I spent fay boyhood there. But you've never been there."

"I—what"—

"You've never been at Rakedale Hall. Why? Because you're not Allan Harrowby! That's why."

To be continued.

Pricking the Sheriffs.

In each county of England and Wales there is a high sheriff, whose principal offices are to attend judges on the circuit, and to act as returning officers for county elections. They also have to be present at any executions that may take place during their year of office.

Quite an interesting ceremony is gone through when "pricking," or selecting them.

The qualification for the post is the possession of landed property bringing in an annual income of not less than £500.

When the judge visits a county town on his summer circuit, the high sheriff presents him with a list of at least four names of people qualified to succeed him in his office. This list he keeps—until summoned in November to attend at the Lord Chief Justice's court with the Lord Chancellor, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the president of the Privy Council, and all the other judges who were on summer circuit—for the selection of sheriffs for the ensuing year.

Here they listen to the excuses of land-owners whose names have been suggested for the office, but who profess inability to serve.

The King's Remembrancer reads the roll for the various counties, and the final selection, consisting of three names for each county, is submitted to the king, who, with a golden bodkin, pricks the margin of the parchment on which they are written against the first name on each list.

If the other two names will be brought up the following year, and usually the holder of one of them is chosen for the office.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. Plain Talks - No. 7

DEAR PEOPLE,—

We purpose taking for our text this period, "Sell Your Hammer and Buy a Horn." Our past lectures, besides being to us very profitable, have proved also to save annoyed one or two persons, namely, bums and stool pigeons. So adopt our apologies if we seem to be blowing a little, and try us out and we will prove our words. We intend during the coming months to do a little profit sharing among our friends. Whilst visiting in Toronto and West it was our good fortune to become acquainted with leather dealers of a much larger standing than some of our competitors, and also to buy in markets more reasonable. By buying in large quantities we were able to purchase the best oak tanned leather at 17c. below ordinary market price. So as an inducement for you to try out this real good quality we intend to make a big reduction in the price of our shoe repairs, so take note of the following list and give us a trial to convince you we have the real goods.

Town Price		Our Price
$1.45	Men's Soles	$1.30
.50	Men's Heels	.40
1.10	Ladies' Soles	.90
.35	Ladies' Heels	.25

Foresters' Island, over which millions of words have been written, million of words spoken, and over a million dollars spread over its face—all for naught, and which went to decay with a certain amount of ignominy, has again come to life and, through a deal engineered by William J. Stainton, the island has become the property, in fee simple, of Thomas W. McWain, one of Deseronto's most progressive and enterprising citizens. Mr. McWain will improve and utilize the island in such a manner that Deseronto will be benefitted as well as an economic benefit to the purchaser. The dwelling and a small strip of ground owned by Mrs. Johnson is alone excepted in the purchase.

Kaladar, Oct. 3rd—A fatal accident occurred just east of this station Saturday night, when Fred Playfair lost his life while on duty as brakesman on the C.P.R. extra freight. This train took the passing track at Kenebec siding to meet an eastbound, and when pulling out Fairplay, who was riding on the engine, dropped his glove at the switch. Alighting to recover it, he caught the van and proceeded over the train to the engine, but never reached it. On arrival at Kaladar Station the discovery was made that he was missing. An engine crew went back and picked up the unfortunate man's body from the road side. Life was extinct and death must have been instantaneous. Young Playfafir had only been in the service a short time. The body was taken to Tweed.
